Maya Beliefs

Religion was an important part of the ancient Maya culture.

The Maya believed in and worshipped a number of different gods. They believed that the gods had a good side and a bad side and that they could help or hurt them.

The Maya had complicated rituals involving prayer, singing, dancing and sacrifices. These sacrifices (mainly of slaves) which involved letting blood were held to honour the rise of a husband to ruler, a major victory in battle or the birth of the heir to the throne.

Priests were very important in Maya society as it was believed that they could communicate directly with the gods. The priests were responsible for leading rituals of worship and sacrifice, and telling the people what the gods wanted them to do. They would tell the people when to plant crops, who to marry and what sacrifices they should make. The people did all these things because they believed that the priest was speaking the wishes of the gods.

Blood Letting

Stone carvings show rulers and nobles giving blood sacrifices. These primary sources help archaeologists understand what the Maya believed.

This lintel shows Shield Jaguar, the warrior king of Yaxchilan, standing over his wife, Lady Xook, holding an enormous flaming torch. Lady Xook is pulling a thorn-studded rope through her tongue in an act of blood letting to honour the gods.

The end of the Maya

In the ninth century, the Maya world was turned upside down. Many of the great centres like Tikal were deserted and abandoned. Stone masons stopped making stelae (monuments).

The sacred temples and palaces briefly became home to a few squatters, who left household rubbish in the once beautiful buildings. When they left, Tikal was abandoned forever, and the Maya civilisation never recovered.

For decades, archaeologists have been searching for an explanation of the Maya collapse. Many theories have been put forward, ranging from warfare and invasion to migration, disease and over-farming.
